

Answer to what I want to accomplish in the teaching profession.

I hope to affect a great, positive impact on my students' lives, and attain the opportunity to teach long term. I want my students to engage in learning while in my classroom, and become motivated to learn and explore by experiencing my profound passion for innovation and the use of technology in the classroom. I will pay close attention to the students and digress their individual learning styles, so that I may be better suited to be their instructor and mentor in fields beyond the realm which I specialize in. The children come to the class as separate pupils, but through enforcement and facilitation, they—we—leave as a team. I want them to be able to make mistakes and learn from them without feeling disappointed, to discover, share, and create.

Every moment in the classroom requires student attention, so the atmosphere must be open and friendly, safe for expression and experimentation. Gently reminding the students about the classroom goals, standards, and ethics that they have delineated at the beginning of the school year helps to create an ambiance of mutual trust and support, sustaining a dynamic learning experience.

I want my students to enjoy coming to class, and to understand that they are important, and their work matters to me. I hope they will come to believe that their work with me will help them to succeed in their life and will carry with them into the future. Each child is unique and brings a wealth of knowledge and experience to the classroom. I hope to build upon their knowledge and plan to learn from them as well.
